Year 9

The rush, the fear, the creativity, what if I'm caught?
 The hideaway, my signature, for all to see This town is our canvas, we work in the dark, we work in silence,
 The shuffling of our feet
 The shake and spray of cans in add to be heard
 We work on bleak buildings, in streets of sorrow.
 Rushing boundaries of conformity, our dreams Expressed with colourful words and inspiring pictures Stretched over despairing walls of our dim society.
 Change is coming, we are looked down upon now.
 But soon we will be acknowledged. Artistic minds, the only Very we knew to break free.
 This is our time to shine, these nights are our haven
 As the powerful air rises, spreading gorgeous light over
 Our town
 Our work is revealed, some people like it, it angers others
 But we are proud
 Admired by some, yet our haters hold too much power Our creators are covered up, paint and disgust is wiped over them
 But we do not loose hope that one day, we, we and Our way of amazing self expression will be accepted
 So tonight, we start again

Isabella Poletti

The isolated street alleys and bleak Walls have no power no expression no force at all.
 The intensity of art has no bounds to crossed The expression of oneself is never lost.
 When the techniques, talents and emotions Come through the overwhelming difference Is extraordinary to others and you
 It comes from the heart and represents You. It's the spray can, the paint the Picture that defines you.
 It's meaning of life, it's you being bold It's the beauty of art, it will never grow old It's the definition of resemblance. It's love In itself, urban art, it's me expressing Myself.

Laekin Morrow

My Urban Art Poetry Rhyme
 Urban Art, Street Art
 They mean the same
 It's great to put in a part
 But think!! It's not for the fame.
 As it's unlimited to the social feeling
 It kind of identity rights
 And for them enjoying you're revealing It's for your cities delight
 There's no right nor wrong
 Modern in itself
 It's kind of like a little song
 That you don't use with your mouth
 My Urban Art Poetry Rhyme
 Reveals what I feel inside
 How I think that it's time
 That were no longer need to hide.
 To brig our and show
 The things we can create
 What we have are what we know
 There's no need for any hate.

Ngaro Angell

Urban art defines me
 Urban art is what defines me
 It is who I am
 What I do
 Urban art is believing identity
 Its what I see
 Who I show
 Urban art is everything hoe
 Without urban art, the walls of the city street
 Stretch out into the dark nothingness Without Urban art, my feelings of strife remain Bottled up inside, unable to escape.
 Without urban art, I can not reveal my true self Through the bright colours embedded on the Wall for all to see
 I need urban art
 To help define me
 To show my emotions
 To guide me in life
 To make me who I am
 I define urban art and it defines me.

Angelitsa Johnson

Freedom of Expression

A wall is my blank canvas,
A spray can my tool,
A few different colours splashed here
And there,
Among the words I am KWL.
Nothing makes me feel,
As open and honest as this,
The freedom to do as I please,
Is a feeling of total bliss.
The others before me,
Have their names in hold,
They are the masters,
The generation of old.
I do this as a way to show my art,
Others just for the fun of it,
I see it as a way to show me,
Others just to do their bit.
But here comes the opposition
Here comes the oppression Whatever happened to,
The freedom of expression.

Danielle Uka

Urban art
Colourful, ruthless
Creating, spraying, expressing
The world's like your canvas Venting, revealing, defining [Individuality, beautiful Street beauty.

Georgina Lui

Urban Art is inspired from the heart
Hand and Feet emotional and evolutionary Dance moves that are inspirational.
In the streets they dance to the beat Making a scene expressing your style Wanting fame, but you remain the same Revealing yourself, within art
It's unquestionable, a lifestyle
Exciting yet stable.
Colours representing life,
Moves expressing yourself.
Energetic decorations on walls.
Structuring the night
While getting away from Siren lights bright walls and Beautiful art. Young kids that are lost they're being bold and but out of sight, it's the definition of oneself and the meaning of art.

Year 11

The Playground

Seven years of age, so young my heart is racing like it is going to pop out of my chest. Bright colours reflecting in my eyes. The feeling of morning sun rising gives me goosebumps through my body. I get a shiver down my spine. Happily, I gaze at it, beautiful.
So bright and colourful.

I see it all connecting together. I hear children's little voices in the background and the smell the happiness in the air. My big brown eyes lost in my own world, thinking unexpected things. I feel so comfortable, like I belong here. Things running in and out of my head.
Should I?

I just go for it, never thinking about the consequences.
I feel my small secure legs running through the grass, slowly coming to a stop. I'm in a dream. I'm in disbelief. A PLAYGROUND! I smile as if I've never seen such a thing, so big and colourful.

I see all the little kids playing on the bright yellow slide and parents chattering to each other and watching their kids play. The big yellow slide looks so fun! I run for it, waiting in line for all the other kids to have their turn. I wait. . .

Time has now gone by. I've grown up and have responsibilities. I look back on the days where I used to run back to the park every single day, play with my friends, wait in line with no patience for the big yellow slide, all grubby and sticky. Those days, I never used to care.

Fifteen years of age, I stare at the playground with disbelief. My heart has dropped, I feel as if I am going to fall to the ground like a balloon that has burst. I'll never get it back again. I no longer see the beautiful playground I used to see. The big yellow slide I had no patience for is now faded into a brown colour that makes the slide look so old and grubby. Or is it just my eyes? I smell the cigarette lingering in the air. It goes through my nostrils and down my throat, I feel disgusted in what people have done to such a beautiful thing. I hear the voices of adults arguing and children crying, the sound of police sirens ringing in my head. I feel afraid.

Samoa-Morning and Afternoon

In the early morning, I lay awake on my bed with my eyes wide open. My shoulders were aching tiredly from playing volleyball so hard. Wishing for noon to be near I slowly gazed outside the window to see the view of heavy dew grass from the cold at night. The coconut trees were there, as tall as mountains, branches swirling from side to side like flying birds, blocking the morning light from shining through.

My face went numb and bright red. I go out of bed to take a closer look outside. Leaves were seen everywhere that have fallen from the trees during midnight. Birds were making noises, rumbling and singing to rhythm. Outside seemed to be very silent and calm. You could hear nothing but the sound of wind and cars mixed together in the air creating blissful sounds as it welcomed you for the day to start.

On foot outside the front door putting on my gumboots now. Old ladies were going for their walk on the side of the stretched solid tar road. This was their daily schedule for every morning. Taking a very deep breath. Inhaling the tempting smell of the fresh bread that is coming from the 'Bread-Truck' in front of my house. The smell of cookies and muffins overflowing my stomach into desperate hunger, like a cat seeing mice for dinner. Women of the village rushing and looking so full of energy towards the truck. Impatiently pushing each other so they can buy bread to make breakfast for their families.

Later when the clock strikes twelve in the afternoon I will wipe the sweat off that has dampened my caramel forehead, while picking up rubbish waiting to be removed. The sun will be shining so powerfully and brightly that I will see the heat on the road shimmering.

The heat will be so strong burning through my flesh, like being stabbed by millions of little knives. I will be wishing I was in the cold winter season of NZ at the time. I will finally manage to finish picking up the rubbish. The grass and ground now all dried looking, like plants that need to be watered.

Then I will be sitting under our family's enormous breadfruit tree that has overgrown to our neighbour's house. Take a deep breath of relief. Found the perfect spot to cool my painful sunburnt body. The road busy, cars zooming pass everywhere. Driving pass the speed limit like aeroplanes getting ready to take off. Men cleaning their yards using their own hands and sticks, while kids will be playing games. Balls flying everywhere while bats will be swinging. Women laughing and gossiping to each like always, they will be cooking food for dinner. All their loudness and energy will fill the air with mixed sounds of fun.

I will smell the strong, mouth watering island food entering my body. Taro and Chop suey the only smells that matter at the moment. Hard to stop sniffing it. My mum calling my name "Senerita come have lunch!" and me feeling extremely joyful. In the early morning I can't wait already for afternoon.

Senerita Felise

Lost love

You had my heart from the first time we met With a simple smile I was lost in your world impossible to escape from the words you reached me with you say I was from your reach when you were too far from mine.

I say that now that you've gone too far, I need you here where you belong.

Lost in a dream forgotten the past, no matter how many times you hurt me, you have me where I belong.

I know you well

I know what you feel

But I didn't act upon any of my feelings not wanting to lose myself in you once more

I knew I couldn't have you, you were too much for me my love for you was like a once upon a dream.

You made me give up

I felt like you didn't want me

My heart screamed twenty seven languages to try and reach you when I see you I want to cry the pain in my heart feels like my going to die.

You made me smile as I made you smile you made my heart beat in an impossible style.

Your sadness was my sadness

You became my reason for living,

You became my everything.

Taranaki, the beautiful maunga

A place where beauty lays

Reminding me about my ancestors

Addicted to the feelings

Never wanted to say goodbye

Always feeling the breeze in the afternoon

'Karanga mai', hearing the old ladies

Inhaling the smell of nature

My love for the maunga will never end

A place where peace will never die

Uniquely loving the maunga like my own papa

Never letting go of my love for the maunga

Gaining mana and aroha from the maunga

Amazed at the power I feel from the maunga

What Happened To Coffee's Creek?

While I was descending the hill, all I saw at Coffee's Creek was a gigantic tree with lots of branches and leaves. Surrounding this large tree were clothes, towels and little kids whose parents were blowing up their little water wings. The little kids waited eagerly to jump straight into the water. As I got closer I heard the wind whistling cheerfully in the trees and the teenagers shouting and screaming as they were having fun: jumping off the swings and into the water.

As soon as I opened the gate, I noticed that the little kids, the parents, and the teenagers were my family. The bejeweled water looked so beautiful, because where the sun hit the water, I saw the crystal-clear depths. I realized that there are many ways of getting down but the easiest way was the swing. I got changed into my togs and I put my towel in the sun so it would be nice and hot when I had to dry myself off.

I stood at the top of the cliff and my cousin passed the swing to me. I stood there, took a deep breath and pushed off. I looked down and then when it went out far enough, I let go and did a big bomb. My body quickly reacted to the cold water but then after a while my body got used to it. I swam to the rocks and just sat on it as I watched my cousin jump off the cliff and straight into the water. All I heard was him laughing but then he disappeared without warning. I waited and waited for him to come up but – no sign of him. I was getting very worried about him. All of a sudden, I felt someone pulled my leg and out popped my cousin's head and he was laughing at me. I pushed him away and screamed, "You're an egg!"

I took one last dive before I left just thinking to myself what a wonderful summer day it was. That is when I was four and when Coffee's Creek was full of life.

Eleven years on... I walked down that same hill, but all I saw was a vast, lonely tree with hardly any branches on it. In addition, there was no sign of anyone being there-no clothes, towels, or even little kids. As I eventually arrived closer, I heard nothing but the wind in the deserted silence.

I opened the gate and saw that the easiest way of getting down was no longer there as the swing had been cut down. The sun no longer hit the water, and it was a gloomy day. I walked around the tree so I could go down to the rocks to head to the bottom but there was a sign prohibiting me from getting down. I decided to read the sign which advised "You are no longer allowed to swim in this creek due to the misuse of it". I just stood there in shock. I thought to myself "What happened to this place? How did it end up like this?"

I walked back around the tree and peered vacantly at the water, it was not what it used to be. I only just saw the bottom of the murky water. I stood there, looked, and just remembered what used to be here what were once wonderful summer days was now only a vague memory.

Talisha Clarke

Awaited Love

You walk on by me and don't seem to notice, I stand here, waiting for a day which would probably never come by.

I want you to notice, I want you to see,
How much I'd care if there was a you and me.
You send me into heart frenzies when you walk on by, your scent becomes addicting as time goes by.
I know you don't see me, I know you don't know, How much I just wish you'd see me for being just me.
I'm not like every guy you usually fall for,
I'm not a player, I'm not a jerk,
I'm just a boy who wants to be there,
Be there for you.

My heart is sensitive it screams for you,
I just want to show you how much I love you.
If you give me a chance I'll show you now, how you being you makes me fall to the ground.
I fall so fast, I fall so quick, I fall cause you make me fall, for you that is.

The moment we first talked you made me fall, fall so deep that I'm unable to be restored.
You keep me awake, as flashbacks come to mind.
Your smile shines your pathway to meet mine.
Your beauty is impossible to describe, there's certainly no words to explain how beautiful you are.

Every time I see you, my heart stops beating, You set fireworks in my head as you walk on by.
I don't understand how you make me feel this way, but a heart is a heart and you make me feel.
I swim in darkness, sometimes depression, Once upon a time is better with a ending, a ending that ends with a me and a you.
